County G O P Set Aug. 18-23 Finance Week

Oxford County Republicans have designated the week of August 18 for raising the necessary funds to support the local, state and national campaign. Elmore C Edmunds is County Finance Chairman with each of the towns running their local drive and reporting results.

On Monday evening, August 25, following the finance campaign, the county committee, candidates, and town chairmen will hold a meeting at the South Paris court house for campaign planning. This will be the last county-wide meeting of its kind before the Sept. 8 election.

All candidates will be present at the Rally to be held at Association Hall on Thursday evening, Aug. 28. The speaking program will start at 8:15 following supper at the Congregational Church at 7 p. m. and concert by the combined West Paris-South Paris band at the hall beginning at 7:45.

STATE GRANGE TO PLAY PROMINENT PART IN "MAINE EVENT"

"Maine on Parade" briefly describes the concept and scope of THE MAINE EVENT. Sponsored by the Greater Portland Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with various State-wide organizations, it will seek to integrate into one mammoth exposition the best features of Maine's industrial, agricultural, civic and cultural life.

The Scarborough Downs layout was found to be the most suitable in the State of Maine for such an exposition, possessing a large exhibition hall and mezzanine under the grandstand, unlimited parking areas and acres of level ground for large outdoor exhibits, pageants, demonstrations and Armed Forces maneuvers.

Each of the ten days of the exposition has a special theme, such as State of Maine Day, Sportsman's Day, Indian-Faith Day, Children's and Youth Day, Canadian and French-Canadian Day, Woman's Day, Armed Forces Day, Maine Municipalities Day, Agriculture Day, and a grand patriotic climax on American Day.

The Maine State Grange will play a prominent part in THE MAINE EVENT. The State Grange committee, Mr and Mrs Carl Jordan of Portland; Mr and Mrs Clyde Goff, Peaks Island; and James Littlejohn of Scarborough, are planning definite projects to bring the Grange prominently to the attention of the more than 150,000 estimated audience at the exposition.

Afternoon and evening programs, different for each day, will take place on both the infield of the Downs and on a 74 by 56 foot outdoor stage, the largest ever built in Maine. This stage will contain a pool, 48 by 24 feet and four feet deep, in which water events will be held. It will contain a disappearing fountain for sending color-lighted sprays 40 feet into the air.

TWENTIETH ANNUAL STATE CAMP NEXT WEEK

Then twentieth annual State 4-H Club camp will be held at the University of Maine, Orono, Wednesday to Saturday, August 20 to 23. Five girls, six boys, and one local leader from each county are entitled to attend when chosen as delegates. A feature of the camp will be the State 4-H tractor driving contest on Thursday. Principal out-of-state speaker will be Miss Ada May Marshall of New York City

EARLE DOUCETTE TELLS HOW TO PREPARE FISH

If the multitudes of fishermen who love to catch 'em but hate to clean 'em read Earle Doucette's story, now appearing in Sports Afield magazine, entitled, "How to Prepare a Fish in 90 Seconds," they will discover that there is really nothing to it.

As publicity director for the Maine Development Commission a recognized authority on Maine fishing, Earle recently wrote a book, "The Fisherman's Guide to Maine," telling all about how and where to catch fish. As a sequel to this "fisherman's bible," he now reveals what to do with them between the lake and the fry-pan in this Sports Afield picture story.

The steps in the simplified minute-and-a-half method, that is now used by many Maine guides, are graphically illustrated by photographs of the author taken by the well-known sports photographer, George Woodruff of Boston.

According to Earle, "Cleaning fish this way does not mess up the kitchen, it leaves all the delicate fats and meat on the fillets, and is only slightly more complicated than shelling peanuts."

IT TAKES TIME TO STOP

"Can you stop in Time?" This was the question directed toward Maine motorists today by the Maine State Police Division of Traffic and Safety.

"Tests prove," continued the Division, "that the average driver, after seeing danger, requires 3-4 of a second reaction time before he can apply his brakes. Translated into distance traveled at 20 miles per hour, this means that his car has moved 22 feet before his foot hits the brake pedal. If his brakes are efficient, and if the road surface is dry, his car will travel 20 feet more before coming to a stop. Altogether, the total distance traveled after the danger is recognized will be 42 feet!

"Remember," adds the Division, "these figures are based upon average drivers, good brakes, and ideal road conditions.

"At forty miles per hour, the total distance required for stopping under the same conditions is 143 feet!"

The Division urges us to keep these figures in mind to regulate our driving speed accordingly.

12,000 Chicks Lost in Farm Fire in Mason

The farm home of Mr and Mrs Clarence Kimball in Mason was practically destroyed and the adjoining 40x100 foot three-story barn housing 12,000 chickens burned flat in a quick fire Saturday night. The blaze followed an explosion of unknown origin about 10 minutes after lights were turned on in the large building about 9:30.

Besides the 12,000 chickens nearly five weeks old, four tons of grain were destroyed and nothing was saved from the newly equipped kitchen in the house. Winter clothing, canned goods and some furniture were saved from the home. The Bethel fire department did much to retard the fire in the house.

A hot water heating system was recently completed in the barn which was completely fitted with all conveniences for the chicken raising business.

Mr and Mrs Kimball moved to the farm, formerly the Ernest Morrill place, about a year ago. Their loss, estimated at $15,000 was partially covered by insurance.

Fireman Earle Hutchinson suffered arm and shoulder burns and Fireman Al Baker was overcome by smoke for a short time.

LOOKING AHEAD

By GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Our Stake in Oil Exploration

Scarcely more than a stone's throw from my home, ditching machines and other mechanical wonders recently buried long sections of a huge steel pipe. These formed parts of the amazing 1400-mile-long natural gas pipeline between East Texas and Joliet, Illinois, and through it today passes fuel for the factories and homes of Chicago. The laying of the pipeline across a wide expanse of our nation and beneath such great rivers as the Red, the Arkansas and the Mississippi constituted one of the engineering miracles of the 20th century.

The huge undertaking benefits our city, state and nation. Many communities along the pipeline, which did not have gas for fuel now have it. In Searcy we already had gas, but the new pipeline has brought enlargement to a number of our citizens' industries. Just southeast of the city a big booster station is being built, constructing it a small community is being constructed for the families of the people who will operate the station. By arranging a great new supply of fuel into the industrial heart of our nation the pipeline [illegible] asset.

Lots of Gas

A 24-inch pipeline 1400 miles long, bringing fuel from Texas on the Gulf to Illinois in the Great Lakes region is an almost unbelievable reality to anyone not familiar with the petroleum industry or the engineering it entails. It entailed some of the pipe being lowered into the ditch in half-mile lengths and joined to one of the new lines of the Texas Eastern Transmission Company to be close. How much gas will be carried through this pipeline in a single day?

Across Oklahoma [illegible] to be said to be a matter of fact tone.

"You mean each day?"

"Yes, each day," he said.

All the gas sold to Arkansas and to be one of the big producers [illegible] supply such a pipeline [illegible] in more than a few years. I asked the pipeline official if the company weren't taking a pretty big chance on there being enough gas reserves available to supply the pipeline over a period of years.

Huge Investment

Yes there is of course an element of chance to be said. Were spending about $24,000,000 on this pipeline. We couldn't invest that kind of money if we weren't reasonably sure additional gas wells and new gas fields would be brought in. That is the chance we're taking.

Intensive exploration by the petroleum industry has been carried on since 1925 when Congress became alarmed at the dwindling reserves of oil and gas and provided an extra incentive. At that time the 27½ per cent depletion allowance was written into the Federal income tax as a means of encouraging the industry to find oil. Since then [illegible] have been returned from big oil fields to the search for more oil and gas. Natural gas reserves have increased accordingly.

Like Final Devastation

The incentive established in 1925 and reaffirmed by a number of Congresses since permits the petroleum company of the wildcat, [illegible] to set aside about a fourth of his profits on successful drilling ventures so that funds will be available for new explorations. Mr. Ellis, chairman of the Arkansas State Oil and Gas Commission, explained the depletion allowance as being similar to the depreciation allowance on buildings and equipment permitting owners to save and replace.

"The value of an oil well property, unlike that of other wasting assets, like a coal mine, does not decline gradually as the oil is taken out," Mr. Ellis said. "In other words it would not do the mine any [illegible] of operations could be made a sum to drill new wells just as an industry could set aside a sum to buy new machinery and warehouses fall into disuse. The depletion allowance, providing tax deductions for depletion serves this purpose." It adds nothing to the average [illegible] oil well that can be put into the wells drilled proves to be a [illegible] the expense may be [illegible]

DALE CARNEGIE

THIS STORY of two persons who learned to conquer themselves was told me by David S. Gonyer, Bridgeport, Conn., after he came out of the Army.

His mother was injured in an automobile accident and this left her in a nervous state just before David enlisted in the navy. His enlistment hit her hard and in her condition she made no effort to conquer her worry over him. No matter that many other mothers were suffering the same trial, no matter that the majority of our soldiers and sailors have returned safe and sound from our wars, she saw only her own trouble.

Carnegie

So David wasn't frank with her and allowed her to think that he was not stationed anywhere near a danger zone, although he was in the thick of the fighting at Leyte Island. He also asked relatives and mutual friends not to tell her where he was.

Suddenly letters from her ceased and his sister wrote she had burned her hand but was all right. Later her letters resumed. It wasn't until he came home that he learned she had worried herself into a nervous breakdown immediately following someone accidentally telling her that he was in action. When he saw her after his return she had to be carried up and down the stairs.

One day her doctor knowing that her illness was due wholly to her mental attitude, suggested that she try Christian Science. She asked a practitioner to visit her, and after several discussions, she was convinced that her trouble was brought on by her own self.

When David arrived home, he scoffed at Christian Science; but only for a short while after he heard his mother's story. She had been so ill that she had been sent to a hospital. That was when her letters to David had ceased. It was after she had gained faith in God through Christian Science that she resumed her letter writing. His mother's example so impressed David that never again will he be subject to Fear as he once knew it.

THE GOOFY ONES

Reprinted from The Santa Ana Register, Santa Ana, Calif.

It was 20 years ago that the Squire of Hyde Park hitched up to a microphone and crooned the opening bars of the New Deal Stomp.

Ah, those were the days!

Senator Jim Farley was riding herd on the legion of two-bit wardheelers who had granted the Old Master into the White House.

Charlie Michelson was making love to the gentry of the press.

The team of Ely & Beatch — known to their friends as Corcoran and Cohen — were doing odd jobs stuffing obstructions into clauses and putting the dirty [illegible] under cover where nobody'd see it.

Ben Cohen was busier than a cat on a tin roof looking pretty and making like he had something [illegible] in his head.

Felix Frankfurter was operating the Harvard Law School on an assembly-line basis, grinding out his "little but dogs" to take over government jobs that no self-respecting lawyer would touch with a 10 per cent contingency.

Every [illegible] misfit on an Ivy League faculty was recruited for a fantastic musical-comedy farce called the Brain Trust.

It was just about the biggest celebration since Pat chased the snakes out of Ireland.

* * *

It was the beginning of the biggest freehand bust in history.

It was the kickoff of a political drunk that was going to make a Roman saturnalia look like a regional convention of the Epworth League.

It set the pace for what was to follow.

Over the loudspeaker came the Magic Voice from Never-Never Land.

"We have nothing to fear but fear itself," the Magic Voice said.

And over in the Kremlin, a big-time burglar, counterfeiter, assassin and double-crosser laughed to beat hell.

"We must not worry about the national debt," the Magic Voice went on. "For, after all, we owe it to ourselves."

And once more the man with the bushy moustache nodded in approval. It was going just the way old Lenin predicted.

It was in 1929 that it happened. Some historian will say that year marked our departure from free enterprise, but that is not entirely correct. It was before that the Republicans led us down the first steps to socialism with high tariffs, graduated income taxes, and federal control of credit.

But 1932 marked the year the intellectuals took over the year a bunch of bums who never did anything themselves began to tell everyone else how to do things.

It was the year we launched into a consolidation of the three branches of government.

The year 1932 was the beginning of "security at any price." Print enough money so's everybody will have a potful. Kill the little pigs. Liquidate the kulaks.

Everyone with two dimes to rub together was an enemy of society and there was nothing so glorious as to be flat on your fanny and first in line at the WPA pay window.

The Real American was a strapping [illegible] who had outgrown a desire to acquire things via the work route.

Human rights above property rights was the cry; and the band played so loud nobody could hear the guys in the back row asking: "Aren't property rights part of our human rights?"

* * *

LESSON WORTH IT

Yes, it was quite a ball.

The Old Master did a magnificent job of work. He sang like a canary the words written by Charlie Michelson and the music composed by Sammy Rosenman. Maybe he didn't exactly understand it himself, but, as he pointed out, he was "an Olympian" and who expects the gods to understand silly little things like morality?

The intellectuals were going to legislate away the human desire to acquire things — a process which has steadily improved the living standards of all men.

The desire to own something was "greed." The way to produce wealth was to lean on a shovel handle.

He lived to suffer some terrible licks from fellows like the Old Curmudgeon, a professional scold, and Jim Farley, too, but mostly he buried his own dead, as in the case of Bobbinhead Wallace.

In a way, it was the most expensive experiment in all of history. It cost us thousands of lives, billions of dollars an uncertain future, and Harry Truman.

It will have been worth the sacrifice only if we've learned our lesson as George Washington preached it:

WORTH REPEATING

"We are a people on the make. We take from the government on any pretext. Even the most simple, everyday services can be assured only through gratitudes to those who render them" — Marlboro (Mass.) Enterprise.

"You hear a lot about the old Army game, but you don't hear nearly enough about the old congressional game" — New Haven (Conn.) Journal Courier.

"Under what is termed the 'old guard' and the earlier principals of the Republican party we had, for one thing, PEACE. We had no crucifying income taxes for the well-to-do; none at all for the average man" — Wakefield (Mass.) Item.

"We have known that public spending has increased at a terrific pace in recent years but it comes as a surprise to learn that not only can the government free spenders throw our money down the drain recklessly but they have legal protection against disclosing the location of the drain" — Milford (Mass.) News.

Ideas from other editors

THE Smithfield Herald, Smithfield, North Carolina, had this to say recently concerning a problem that has been uppermost in the minds of southerners since the Civil War:

"Most of us have seen with our own eyes evidence of the rapid economic progress of the South in recent years; on every hand are new factories, new chimneys, new industrial developments. But how many of us have realized that meantime the South has been suffering from a leakage in one of its greatest assets—its youth?

"It is an old story that ever since the aftermath of the Civil War laid a deadening hand on the South, it has had to export annually thousands of its young men to other parts of the country. North and West they go, looking for jobs, for a wider life, and above all, for richer opportunities. For a time after the turn of the century this exportation seemed to fall off. But census reports show that it is still being maintained in some volume. Even in North Carolina, where the level of economic well-being is being gradually raised, not a few counties, according to official reports, lost population during the last decade.

"Brains, talent, energy, originality, will always seek a market where they will enjoy the most scope. Our job is not to waste time finding fault with this natural tendency, but to learn the cause of the migration of youth and to apply the remedy.

"Here in North Carolina are we suffering from sloth, inertia, pastworship, outworn prejudices, or a crablike clinging to old and musty ways?

"If so, we may expect to see the outbound stream of youth continue to widen and swell. North Carolina is a tremendous producer of tobacco, textiles, and young people. If a blight struck the first two, the whole state would be aroused. Yet the third is the greatest asset of all. We spend much time worrying about Russia. But let us sweep off our own doorstep first."

Pointless Record

From The Eufaula Tribune, Eufaula, Alabama:

"That beautiful new super-liner, United States, just succeeded in getting across the ocean and back faster than any other passenger ship in history. She proved that we can now get across the Atlantic ocean in three days 10 hours and 40 minutes which is 14 hours faster than the Queen Mary made it on her record run many years back. The trip back, however took somewhat longer but still established a record.

"Now that we know we can get across the Atlantic faster than ever before by boat, the question arises, why should we?"

The Lord Takes a Hand

From the Napoleon Northwest News, Napoleon, Ohio:

"Our neighboring Fulton county is going to add a new enterprise—that of rain making. They were all set to touch off the first batch of artificial rain when the good Lord took a hand in the game and sent good refreshing rain."

THIS WEEK in Washington

ALL SOME Republicans cry that Eisenhower is a Democrat on the Republican ticket, so do some Democrats complain that Stevenson is a Republican running under Democratic colors.

Some political correspondents are writing that on domestic policies the issues of Ike and Adlai are interchangeable. While the Democratic politicians are depending upon Stevenson to whistle-stop the nation in the tune of President Truman's anti-Wall Street, anti-big business campaign of 1948, Edwin A. Lahey, Chicago Daily News political analyst, taunts the Democratic strategists with this quip: "Thrash Stevenson with a strike noose and La Salle street comes out its pores." (La Salle is Chicago's Wall Street.)

Despite the Democratic campaign chiefs' confidence that they can handle their boy, those who know Stevenson best declare that, once in the ring, Stevenson will not change his style of fighting to invade the New Deal-Fair Deal lair.

* * *

Perhaps short on color but long on action, the Democratic chiefs are sitting pretty comfortably on the evidence of satisfaction satisfaction in the fact that they have found an acceptable unity candidate and paired him with a vice presidential candidate from Dixie who is expected to forge the chain of unity even stronger. These chiefs are more interested in their party's lease on the White House than in keeping New Deal style of fighting unmodified.

Nevertheless there is some disagreement in the Democratic camp over Stevenson's objections to the civil rights and Taft-Hartley repeal planks in the Democratic platform. Those steaming the most aren't the professional politicians but real conscientious New Dealers who recognize in Stevenson a man who won't compromise his own beliefs to follow a platform. They probably will stick with Stevenson, however, because of his great integrity, even though it won't buckle under New Deal stress.

* * *

Stevenson's strategy seems to be based upon widening the break in the Republican party while he is healing the break in his own party. He is emphasizing the split personality of the GOP while playing down the schizophrenia in his party. And he, with Sparkman, seems to be just the psychiatric treatment the Democrats needed.

Stevenson will tell the voters that Eisenhower is a nice, fairly liberal fellow, but that in order to get the Old Guard vote he will have to revert to some of the isolationism and hidebound conservatism of the Old Guard. This will frighten the liberal Republicans and might even convert some of them to Stevenson's cause. It is obvious the New Deal enough. It will rankle the Old Guard and kill their enthusiasm for the Republican ticket. It might win a big majority of the independents.

One thing the Democratic strategists overlook—the might see some of the split personality business on Stevenson.

President's Material Policy Commission has just recommended to Congress "that percentage depletion [illegible] owners of the strong inducement to risk capital to enter the relatively risky business of searching for oil and gas." The discovery of new oil and gas fields means more wealth — and more strength in war or peace — to our nation.

As ye would that men should do to you do ye also to them likewise. (Luke 6:31.) Read Luke 10:30-37.

SOMEONE has said: "The Golden Rule is rusty." He meant that it was a useless rule for governing our actions toward others.

Nothing could be further from the truth, for the Golden Rule is positive: "Do ye." The rule of the priest and the Levite was negative. Since they had not injured and robbed the man on the Jericho Road, they did nothing for him. They could not picture themselves in his plight, beaten, stripped of their clothes, and robbed; and sense how appreciative they would be for anyone's help at such a time. Judging by their rule, they remained good religionists, but they fell far short as measure by the Golden Rule.

The Golden Rule demands action. The Good Samaritan could not pass by the injured and robbed man without doing something for him. He put himself in the needy man's place. He had not injured him but he nevertheless stopped, bound up the wounds, took him to the inn, and provided for him.

Prayer

Our Father in heaven, we give Thee thanks for Jesus Christ and His good rule for our lives. Help us to put into action in all life's situations to the honor and glory of our Lord, in whose name we pray. Amen.

Thought For The Day

The Golden Rule is the Master's rule for all our acts.

God's Estimate of Human Life (Temperance).
Exodus 20: 13; Matthew 5: 21-26; 18: 3-6; Luke 9: 52-56.
Golden Texts: Exodus 20: 13.

TODAY we consider the great value that God sets upon human life. This is indicated in the Commandment not to kill and in the ancient law of murder that seems a heritage of mankind: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed." Supporting these laws are the admonitions against malice of the heart, of hatred against another.

To a man is urged to make peace as quickly as possible with an offended brother, and especially so in the time when a man plans to bring his offering unto the altar.

There is a reference to the beauty of childhood and the claim that it have upon men. It would be better for a man to have a millstone tied about his neck and be drowned in the depth of the sea than to cause one of the little ones who believe in Jesus to stumble.

When James and John wanted Jesus to call down fire from heaven to consume the villagers who refused to receive him, the Lord rebuked the two disciples and then took the way into another village.

MORE SEEKING WORK AT RUMFORD MESC OFFICE

July traffic in the Rumford office of the Maine Employment Security Commission was slightly below that of June, according to Manager Ernest F Lever, Jr., who reported 1,342 office calls last month. The June total was 1,456. Bethel is in the area served by the Rumford MESC office.

A high employment level characterized July.

Total placements in July numbered 4,464 of which 4,279 were agricultural, largely for snap bean harvesting, and 125 were nonagricultural.

The active file—men and women seeking jobs—increased about 12 percent during July, from 322 when the month began, to 362 at the end of the month's business. Limited operating schedules of some of the area's wood-turning plants was a factor in the increase.

No 2705 is cut in sizes 2 to 8. Size 4 requires 2¾ yds. 35-in. fabric. No 2216 is cut in sizes 6 to 14. Size 8 requires 3¾ yds. 35-in. fabric.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From the Rev. William E. Thompson, Stevens, S.D.: I remember 50 years ago housewives in Minnesota dried sweet corn, apples, plums, and huckleberries in the sunshine, using window screens with clean dish towels thereon. We dried a whole peck of green peas from the garden on screens hung from ceiling above a wood cooking stove one year.

Mrs. B. A. Fellengill, Essex, Vt.: I wonder how many of us oldsters remember the old elevated oven stove—the hearth to draw out the ashes, the damper in the pipe, a side door in the oven to bake in, four griddles, two short legs in front and two long in back? How well I remember the bread and cakes it could bake.

From Amelia Doctor, Denver, Col.: I remember when we had oranges only at Christmas and we children thought they were a special Christmas fruit.

From Rovena Warren, Harvard, Idaho: I remember when we children spent long winter evenings making lighters to use in place of matches for lighting the candles and the older peoples' pipes. We made them of newspaper cut in inch-wide strips and rolled at an angle to make a long taper. These were carefully snuffed after using so they would last longer.

From J. M. Hillman, Murray, Ky.: I remember when women traveled by horseback using a side saddle and long black riding skirt. They would mount the saddle from a stile block. My wife's side saddle yet hangs in the old gear shed.

BRYANT POND WINS RE-PLAY OF TIE GAME, 9-5

Although holding a 5-1 lead going into the last of the third frame the Bethel A. C. saw their four run lead turn to dust before the abbreviated five and one-half inning contest was terminated.

Don Whitman led the winners with four singles in as many fourtries to plate. Jim Andrews poled one of Bob Buker's curve balls over the fence during Bryant Pond's rally in the third frame. Dick Mills also homered, scoring what turned out to be the wining run leading off in the fifth.

WEST PARIS DEFEATS A. C. 8-1 IN EIGHT INNINGS

West Paris defeated the Bethel A. C. 8-1 in a PTL game played at Thurston Field last Thursday evening. The game was late in starting as several players failed to show up and others were late in arriving.

Bob Buker pitched well for the vanquished Bethelites as the five Bethel errors enabled the winners to score quite freely.

The Pine Tree League schedule calls for Bryant Pond to appear at Thurston Field on Sunday, Aug. 17, at 2:30 p. m. The Buckfield team will play at the same field on Thursday, Aug. 21, at 6 p. m.

Remember this---
A few pennies more buys the Best.

MEAT is an expensive food and should be cooked with care so that you get the most from it. Follow these techniques, and you'll be able to enjoy meat more thoroughly.

When you're pan-broiling chops, liver, bacon or other cuts, pour off the fat as it accumulates so that the meat will not be fried. Broiling implies cooking without fat, so the drippings should not be allowed to gather and thus to fry to crispness a cut meant to be broiled.

Stews and soups require long, slow cooking to develop the flavors fully. This means the liquid with the meat should not boil, but should simmer gently.

Small amounts of liquid are essential for pot roasts or for braising. You do not need to replenish the liquid if the utensil used has a tightly fitting cover, and if low heat is used.

Cook your roasts on a rack, without a cover. Place the fat side up so that the meat bastes itself as the fat melts and runs through the meat. Saves time basting!

Broiled steaks and chops taste best when you add salt and pepper after browning.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Tropical Cooler
(Serves 4)

2 cups mixed, cut fruit, slightly sweetened
1 cup pineapple juice
1 cup orange juice
1 pint vanilla ice cream
Carbonated water

(The fruit may be seasonal—berries, sliced peaches, pineapple, cherries, etc.). Place ½ cup fruit in each of four tall glasses, add to each ¼ cup pineapple juice, ¼ cup orange juice and ¼ pint of ice cream. Stir, then fill glasses with carbonated water and serve at once.

Stuff your pork chops to make the meal go further, as well as to add moisture during the long process required for pork. It's easy to cut a pocket in the thicker chops by running along the rib bone with a sharp knife.

Flaking pieces of meat? It's quickly done by placing the meat in a sack with flour, seasoned with salt and pepper.

Want to cut meat for salad (chicken or ham)? Use pair of scissors shears for a quick job.

One cause of automobile accidents is a highway accident. The Maine State Police remind us that it's [illegible] safety in traffic is everybody's job. We cannot afford to take one unnecessary chance.

GOOD SENSE
BY
RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

THEY DECIDED to be sensible about it.

"I'm only making $30 a week," Ken said. "But I've a good chance of making more soon. I couldn't ask you to get along on $30 a week."

"We'd be happy," Jill told him. "I'd be happy with you no matter what you made a week," she added, practically. "But it is more sensible to wait. Things would be so much easier."

Jill's parents nodded their heads wisely when she told them about it. Their daughter was smart. She had good sense.

"Ken's a bright boy," Mr. Whitney agreed. "He'll be making $50 per in no time at all."

Mr. Whitney had faith. Jill had faith. Ken had faith. But Ken had more. He had incentive. Jill was the incentive. Up until a month ago women hadn't bothered him much. Then he'd met Jill. Neither of them had ever quite recovered from the discovery that they loved each other. It was too wonderful.

Ken was a writer of advertising copy. In the days that followed he wrote advertising copy with a zip and a sparkle that he had never thought himself capable of. He thought surely that Mr. Santrell, his boss, would notice. Mr. Santrell did. He complimented Ken highly and bestowed upon his young shoulders an encouraging pat. But the old pay envelope still contained 30 bucks, no more.

Weeks passed. Ken still zipped out his smart copy, but that was all the good it did him. Every week he opened his pay envelope with an eagerness that made his disappointment double-edged. Every week he hoped that he could call on Jill and tell her that he'd received the raise and there was no need of waiting longer.

But that day didn't come. He and Jill talked about it. Occasionally one of them became discouraged. Then the other assumed a cheerful and optimistic attitude. The raise would come. It was bound to.

But it didn't. Two months passed. Ken began to despair. Jill, he imagined, was becoming less interested. He fancied she was falling out of love with him. He couldn't blame her. On the other hand, if her love were genuine, she'd wait forever.

His fears were realized one day a week later when he saw her out driving with a young man with a black mustache. Sight of the pair laughing and talking together was like a knife-thrust in his heart. He made inquiries and learned that the young man with the black mustache was Cy Parker, son of a business associate of Jill's father. Cy was just home from a year abroad after graduating from college.

The next night when Ken called on Jill he expected her to explain about Cy Parker. But she said nothing. It was a dreary night. The moon was obscured by heavy clouds. There was mist in the air. Ken drove home early. They said good night without kissing.

Ken wished he were dead. He might, he thought, as well be. Death could have no sting like the pain in his heart.

Thereafter the zip and sparkle went out of Ken's advertising copy. He could think of nothing but Jill. Mr. Santrell no longer paused beside his desk to compliment him and pat him on the shoulder. He began to fear for his job. He was miserable.

Three nights later he called on Jill. She was alone, waiting in the living room, dressed for a party. He knew she must be going out with Cy Parker.

"I guess," he said without preamble, "you've thought it over and decided it was a mistake."

"Thought what over?" Jill said.

"About marrying me. If you loved me you wouldn't care how much I was making."

"I've already told you I could be happy with you no matter what you made a week."

"But you wouldn't marry me on 30 dollars a week."

"Who said I wouldn't?"

"Why," said Ken, "why—you did."

"I never. I never said any such thing. I merely agreed with you when you said we ought to be making more. I thought you wanted me to agree. I thought you didn't think we could be happy on $30."

"Well, for gosh sakes!" said Ken. He stared at her. She was looking at him round-eyed. There was a sort of hopeful appeal in her expression.

"Well, for gosh sakes!" he said again, and suddenly popped out of his chair and strode over to the divan where she was sitting.

When Mr. Cy Parker rang the Whitney doorbell 15 minutes later no one answered it. The elder Whitneys were away and Jill was busy. Quite busy. After awhile Mr. Parker went away.

Shortly after this Ken sat up straight. He looked like one who had swooned into a coma and liked it. Jill said:

"And now that we've decided we can be happy on 30 dollars a week, I want to tell you something. I feel that I have the right."

"You certainly have," declared Ken earnestly. "No one in the world has a better right."

"Then tomorrow you start writing advertising copy with the same zip and sparkle that you did before. And after you've been doing it for a week you go into Mr. Santrell and demand a raise."

"But, holy smoke! I can't do that! Why, he might fire—"

"You do as I say," Jill told him. "After all, my opinion ought to be considered if I have to get along on half your salary."

Ken did as he was told. The following Saturday night he rushed up the Whitney front walk with wild whoops of joy.

"What gripes me," Ken said, perplexed, "is why I didn't think of asking him myself long ago."

"There's a lot of things you should have thought of long ago," Jill said wisely.

EXTRA FARM MACHINERY EXHIBIT SPACE SOLD OUT FOR EXPOSITION

Despite the fact that a substantial increase in exhibit space was made available for the farm and road machinery folks at the Eastern State Exposition Sept. 14-21, every inch of it was sold out July 30th, General Manager Jay Reynolds has announced.

The farm machinery show at the Exposition, which now occupies a tented city covering more than five acres of ground, still has a waiting list of eager manufacturers and distributors who desire space in the greatest display and demonstration of mechanized agricultural implements in the East. This year visitors at the Exposition can inspect equipment exceeding $3,000,000 in value to be shown here.

George Bernert, veteran Superintendent of the Farm Machinery Show and also of the Concession Department for more than a quarter of a century, reports that he is completely sold out of concession space for the 1952 show, leaving a sizeable waiting list of applicants who cannot be accomodated.

A large percentage of eating places of the Exposition grounds, ranging from large dining tents to small refreshments stands, will be operated again this year by local churches, services, fraternal organizations and similar groups, an arrangement which enables them to raise funds for worthy purposes and assures the Exposition management of a high type of food service for its patrons.

SENATOR SMITH'S REPORT

by U. S. Senator Margaret C. Smith

Now that Congress has adjourned and the Republican and Democratic conventions are over and the nominees selected, the national legislative and political picture is temporarily in a quiet lull. That won't last long for after Labor Day we can expect the big guns of the two major parties to start firing their campaign salvos.

Our country and our people are indeed fortunate to have the nominees for President that we do. Both General Eisenhower and Governor Stevenson are men of the highest caliber and integrity. I do not think that they will resort to name calling and to smearing. I certainly don't think that they will call each other communists or communist sympathizers. Others may—but I don't think that either of them will stoop to that level.

Indeed we should all be grateful that regardless of the outcome of the election in November, the next President of the United States will be a man of highest character and ability—a man that all of us can be proud of. I think that either of them will try to sweep the corruption out of Washington. I think that either of them will give us a more enlightened and consistent foreign policy. I think that either of them will make serious efforts at cutting the high costs of Government, and trying to cut taxes some.

I think that both of them will try to attain these goals. But I think that one of them will have a better chance of making his tries successful than the other would. Let me admit that as a Republican I am naturally prejudiced for General Eisenhower. Basically I think he could be more successful at attempts to clean out corruption, cut government waste, reduce taxes, oppose Communism here and abroad more effectively, than could Governor Stevens for one very basic and simple reason.

That reason is that the only way to do the job is to sweep clean completely. To sweep clean completely one needs a brand new broom—not merely a new handle to an old broom . . . and not merely the old broom that has been washed but still is worn and stained.

To my way of thinking, respected as he is, Governor Stevens is not a new broom from the Democratic Administration. He is only a new handle to the old Democratic broom. Hard as he may try, it would be far more difficult for him to clean up the Government than it would be for General Eisenhower to do the job for the very obvious reason that it is much harder for a Democrat, regardless of what kind of Democrat he is, to fire other Democrats than it is for a Republican to fire Democrats. The Republican is expected to fire Democrats, even the Democrats are willing to their jobs accept this without question. Thus General Eisenhower would be expected to fire the Truman Democrats in Washington and there would be no question about his doing this. But not so with Governor Stevenson. It will be very hard for him to fire one of the Truman Democrats in Washington and he certainly would not be able to fire all of them in Washington. That in itself is a limit to the degree with which Governor Stevenson regardless of his high intentions can clean out the corruption created in Washington by the Truman Administration. There is a saying that one rotten apple can spoil a barrel of apples. And it is clear that an overwhelming majority of the American people want the Trumanites in Washington swept out of office completely.

Because my 19th presidential election hit the nail on the head when in September 1948 I predicted the exact percentage that Dewey would get and predicted the loss of the White House, the House of Representatives and the Senate by the Republicans to the underdog Truman Democrats, many people have asked me how I size up the 1952 election prospects at this date.

It seems to me as of now that it is a very close race between Eisenhower and Stevenson. That could change greatly in the months to come and end up with a one-sided victory for Eisenhower or Stevenson, although I don't now see much prospect for this. On the first of June, I would have said that if the Republicans nominated General Eisenhower that the prospects of a landslide victory for our side would be great. Today I am not so sure. Frankly, I am surprised at the rapid way in which Stevenson, really a comparatively political unknown outside of Illinois, has taken with the people since his nomination. I suspect that this is because of his great contrast to President Truman. He seems to be an entirely different man.

On the other hand, General Eisenhower has not taken with the people in the overall, sweeping manner that I thought he would. His Abilene, Kansas speech hurt him a great deal. It tarnished him with many people who had up to that time viewed him with starry-eyed adulation. He won a tremendous and thrilling victory at the national convention but it appeared that he had to come from behind to do it. This was somewhat of a shock to many people who had felt that the Presidency was only his for sheer acceptance and that he would not even have to ask for it. This was quite a change from having to fight for it.

In contrast Governor Stevenson did not have to make a fight to get the nomination on the Democratic ticket. It was truly thrust upon him without his asking and in spite of his begging that it not be given to him. As a result Governor Stevenson today somewhat enjoys that which General Eisenhower did first of this year when he said that he would not campaign actively for the Republican nomination. He has not been in a fight as yet and consequently he has not been subjected to the attacks that Eisenhower was in his fight for the Republican nomination. You will recall the smear that the Partisan Republicans of California made against Eisenhower last September in their smear pamphlets distributed throughout the State of Maine and how in a radio broadcast I exposed and denounced those smears and stood up in defense of General Eisenhower although I received condemnation from some of my fellow Maine Republican colleagues for doing this.

The outcome in November will depend to a great extent on how much the September to November campaigning will take the luster off of the current Stevenson prestige and how much his political reputation and standing with the people is dulled and tarnished by the infighting. It will depend to a great extent on how much Stevenson gets himself better known to the people nationally for Eisenhower enjoys a tremendous advantage over him at the present time on this score. This disadvantage can be overcome through the wide coverage of press, radio and television. It will depend to a great extent on the comparative speaking effectiveness of Eisenhower and Stevenson. Stevenson's nomination acceptance speech has temporarily given him the edge over Eisenhower on this point. The question is whether he can increase that edge or even retain it in the campaign speeches.

WHEN the hardy fisher folk along the Gaspe Coast of Quebec province land their catches, they still use the primitive transport of the ox cart to haul the catches to the processing plants and drying racks. Here is a "one ox-power" cart at Perce village plodding along the shore to take a load of cod being landed from one of the fishing boats.

As of now, in my opinion, the edge is slightly for Eisenhower. I certainly hope that General Eisenhower can increase that to an overwhelming lead in the weeks to come and go on to overwhelming victory. But, as I see it now, only General Eisenhower can do this himself—no one can do for him—and he will need the help of every Republican he can get.

There is one very definite healthy sign in Republican ranks. It is the realization that we will have to fight to win. The overconfidence of 1948—and even the overconfidence of as late as June 1, 1952—is gone. In place of this overconfidence is grim determination—and if anything will bring victory to the Republican ticket in November it is this.

Since there will not be any legislative news to report or any Washington happenings with Congress out of session and by being back here at home most of the time, this will be my last monthly report to you until February. Until that time, may I again thank you, the people of Maine, for your support, for your patience, for your understanding, and for your reassurances and encouraging words in difficult times.
